

Testicles 'ripped out in a jealous attack'

A 'JEALOUS' woman has been questioned by police after allegedly tearing out her lover's testicles with her hands.

Helen Hodge is accused of attacking Billy Duncan's genitals after a heated argument in which she accused him of cheating on her.

Mr Duncan, 49, had to have surgery after the alleged attack.

A source told a newspaper: 'Billy was only wearing his underpants at this stage. Helen grabbed his testicles and pulled them as hard as she could. His scrotum had been ripped open and his testicles were dangling by his legs. There was blood all over the flat.'

Ms Hodge, who has a three-year-old son with Mr Duncan, was questioned by police but released without charge.

The dust-up reportedly took place after Mr Duncan celebrated Dundee football club's victory against Inverness Caledonian Thistle in the final of the Alba Challenge Cup on Sunday.

Ms Hodge has denied causing injury to her lover saying: 'I'll admit there was some pushing and shoving going on but I didn't touch his testicles. I've forgotten what his b*****s even look like.'

'He's not been near me for months,' Ms Hodge added.

Officers said their investigation into the alleged incident in Dundee on Monday was ongoing.
